

Distribution of Fall 2007 Student Teaching Placements in the Milwaukee Public Schools

A Project of the Teacher and Principal Quality
Workgroup of the Milwaukee Partnership Academy

April 2008

Distribution of Fall 2007 Student Teaching Placements in the Milwaukee Public Schools

This report is a project of the Teacher and Principal Quality Workgroup (TPQ) of the Milwaukee Partnership Academy. At its August 2007 retreat the TPQ Workgroup developed its annual workplan. As part of those discussions, the topic of establishing a strong recruitment pipeline for hard-to-staff schools was raised. During this discussion, district personnel voiced concerns about getting student teachers placed in hard-to-staff schools, and IHE representatives voiced concerns about the qualities of schools in which students are placed (with a particular concern about the limitations posed by schools that use a strict curriculum of Direct Instruction) as well as the need for selection policies that result in a cadre of strong cooperating teachers available at that school.

To inform this discussion, the mapping project was conducted using data provided directly from area colleges and universities that participate regularly in the activities of the Milwaukee Partnership Academy and that regularly place student teachers in MPS. This list also includes student teaching placements from all of the UW System campuses, as these placements are facilitated directly by MPS.

The report includes five maps and accompanying tables reflecting Fall 2007 student teaching placements as follows:

Map Number	Title
1	Number of colleges or universities placing student teachers in individual MPS schools
2	Number of colleges or universities placing student teachers in individual MPS schools, including total numbers of student teachers per school
3	Number of student teachers from UWM placed at individual MPS schools
4	Number of student teachers from postsecondary institutions other than UWM placed at individual MPS schools
5	MPS Direct Instruction schools with assigned student teachers

Members of the TPQ workgroup view these data as helpful for informing several important issues and questions, including but not limited to:

- What patterns of placements exist now?
- What schools that “should” have student teachers because of their current strengths do not?
- What schools that do have student teachers might not be the best place (knowing that there might be an isolated strong cooperating teacher at that building)?
- How do we build strength at schools that are on their way to becoming stronger?
- How can the district build greater capacity among teachers/schools so they become strong places for student teachers?
- How would a school that wants to house student teachers go about doing that?
- How can this report inform the work of the TNE Cooperating Teacher Academy?
- Should there be an annual (or semi annual) meeting between all field supervisors, student teacher program directors, and MPS staff who know the schools and their capacities?
- How can the resources of student teachers be used more strategically in building strength at a school that needs improvement?
- How can IHEs work together with the district to be more purposeful in the distribution of student teachers?
- How can IHEs work together with the district to make sure a pipeline for new teachers is structured and implemented?

We would like to thank the Teachers for a New Era project faculty and staff at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and specifically Terry Johnson, Geographic Information Systems Specialist, Center for Urban Initiatives and Research at UWM, for their commitment to this project.

For further information regarding this project, please contact the co-chairs of the MPA’s Teacher and Principal Quality Workgroup: Arleen Dansby, MPS (dansbyac@milwaukee.k12.wi.us), Victoria Frazier, MPS (frazierx@milwaukee.k12.wi.us), or Marleen Pugach, UWM (mpugach@uwm.edu).
